On this day, Aug. 17, 1948, the 19th Bombardment Wing was activated at North Guam AFB, which we know today as Andersen AFB. The newly minted wing structure was similar to our wing today with groups of Air Base, Maintenance and Supply, and Medical.

When the Korean War started in 1950, the wing's flying arm, the 19th Bombardment Group, was operationally detached for wartime service, and physically relocated to Kadena AB, Okinawa. After the end of the war, the 19th Bombardment Wing transitioned to B-47s at Pinecastle AFB and then to Homestead AFB, both in Florida. By 1962, the wing transitioned to B-52s and subsequently moved to Robins AFB where it inherited the Black Knights nickname, in 1968.

In 1984, the wing's bombing mission ended and the 19th became an Air Refueling Wing. Five years later, the wing inactivated and the Operations Group carried the 19th identity forward as a small refueling unit. On October 1, 2008, AMC reactivated their most-decorated unit as a combat airlift wing and the host wing for Little Rock AFB, which brings us here today.

The history of the 19th is filled with diverse missions, and the wing called many places home. While a lot of things have changed over the years, the one thing that stays the same is the outstanding Airmen who meet challenges head on and make the mission happen every single day.

Thank you for making the 19th Airlift Wing the home of premier C-130J Combat Airlift.

WE ARE ... BLACK KNIGHTS!

Lake Nyos, Cameroon, an active volcanic crater lake, erupted in August 1986 due to a high concentration of carbon dioxide, killing all living things within a 15-mile radius.

On Aug. 27, 1986, a crew from the 50th Tactical Airlift Squadron flew emergency aid to African villagers in Cameroon after volcanic gas erupted from Lake Nyos, an active volcanic crater lake, killing more than 1,200 people. After the eruption, more than 2,000 survivors evacuated their contaminated homes in Bamenda, Cameroon, with hundreds of evacuees camping in the open countryside. The crew carried 250 canvas tents in a C-130 from Little Rock Air Force Base to Douala, Cameroon, to help the homeless villagers. During the crew’s return flight over Africa, crewmembers were able to view the pyramids and the Great Sphinx. Leadership applauded the crew for their superb efforts in accomplishing a highly visible mission in a professional manner, in spite of the austere communications environment and the remoteness of many mission segments.

Improved security measures implemented at base ECP

By Airman Kevin Sommer Giron
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Little Rock Air Force Base is implementing an Air Force-wide requirement of the REAL ID Act to its installation access policies beginning Sept. 15 in accordance with Public Law 109-13, 49 U.S.C., Section 30301 and the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) Title 6, Part 37.

The act establishes minimum security standards for license issue and production. Additionally, it prohibits federal agencies from accepting driver's licenses and ID cards from states that do not meet the Act's minimum standards.

"The REAL ID ACT enhances security by improving the reliability of state-issued identification documents and helps prevent a person's ability to evade detection by using a fraudulent form of ID," said Jeffery Bardsley, 19th Security Forces Squadron visitor center section chief.

Arkansas and 23 other states have an extension allowing federal agencies to accept driver's licenses from their states until Oct. 10, 2016. Currently, Minnesota, Washington and the U.S. territory of the American Samoa do not meet minimum standards.

As a result, state-issued identification cards or driver's licenses from these states will no longer be accepted at any Air Force installation, unless it is an enhanced drivers licenses.

Though ID cards, which do not meet security and data-collection guidelines, will not be accepted, alternate forms of identification will be allowed. Alternatives include a valid U.S. or foreign government-issued passport, an employment authorization document containing a photograph, or ID cards issued by government agencies that include a photo and biometric information.

The most significant demographic impacted by this implementation will be non-DoD affiliated personnel or guests who do not possess personal identity verification credentials.

According to Air Force officials, all individuals attempting to gain access to an Air Force installation without a DoD ID card will be subject to a routine background check.

Those who do not have the accepted documentation for installation access will not be permitted to enter the base without an approved escort.

"We take the safety of our service members, civilians and their families very seriously," Bardsley said. "The security of our people is one of the Air Force's highest priorities."

“Shanklin took the initiative,” Barnes said. “He recognized that we only had a few maintenance write ups left and took care of it. He put his blood, sweat and tears into the aircraft for the Black-Letter.”

According to the 314th AW factsheet, the 314th AW provides the world’s best C-130 Combat Airlift training to maintainers and pilots. Quality training is what leads to the success of the mission and achievements performed by the individuals working on the aircraft.

“It is the will of the maintainers and crew chiefs that made this happen, but there are a lot more moving parts that made this achievement possible,” Bond said. “It would never happen without the help and support of the 19th Airlift Wing, the 314th Maintenance Group as a whole and the people of Little Rock Air Force Base.”

One man, three wars, four services

By Senior Airman Harry Brexel
19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Few Americans can say they served in three major wars, fewer still can say they were a member of four different branches of the U.S. military. However, Ret. U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Robert Earl "Sam" Puckett has achieved both.

His journey began in 1943, as a 17-year-old Arkansan who enlisted in the U.S. Navy — little did Puckett know, Uncle Sam had different plans for him. Before he was able to begin training at naval boot camp, he was chosen as a volunteer to enlist into the U.S. Marines instead.

"I remember leaving for the (Marine Corps Recruit Depot) Parris Island in South Carolina," Puckett said. "I don't think I heard a kind word my entire time there."

Upon graduating, Puckett made the journey across the U.S. and Pacific Ocean to Saipan. Within one year of enlisting, Puckett entered the fight in World War II as a member of the 2nd Marine Division.

Fighting became brutal and prolonged. Japanese soldiers launched a massive banzai infantry charge and routine tasks made the difference between life and death.

"I first fought in Saipan as a beach bastion," Puckett said. "We had to get to the beach by jumping off our main vessel into a smaller boat. I carried a bazooka, a clip, two canteens and two days' rations. If you didn't make it onto the boat, you didn't make it at all."

Following Saipan, Puckett fought on Iwojima and then Okinawa.

After his extensive tour in Japan, Puckett's enlistment with the U.S. Marine Corps came to an end. However, he returned home as a different person.

"I didn't want to be around people," Puckett said. "I was only comfortable around other military folks."

After only five months as a civilian, Puckett decided to join the military again. This time, he enlisted into the U.S. Army and was assigned to the 759th Military Police Battalion in Berlin, Germany.

"In 1948, the Russians blocked the roads and railways into parts of Berlin," Puckett said. "But the U.S. Air Force provided rations to the Germans in need. There's no telling how many missions U.S. troops flew to help the citizens of Berlin."

On the first day of the Berlin Airlift, or Operation Vittles, approximately 100 U.S. Air Force C-47s made 32 flights into Berlin with 80 tons of cargo, mainly powdered milk, flour and medicine.

Soon after his tour in Germany, Puckett returned home and left the Army. He then joined the U.S. Air Force, which became a separate military service branch from the Army in 1947.

In the Air Force, Puckett returned to Germany and briefly fought in Korea on combat search and rescue helicopters, such as the Sikorsky H-19 "Chickasaw."

Upon returning home and working at multiple stateside bases, Puckett soon left for Asia. This time, he arrived to fight in the Vietnam War.

"Throughout the early 1960s, I fought in the Vietnam War but I spent the majority of my time in Laos and Cambodia," Puckett said.

Puckett worked in communications during the Vietnam War. As American involvement in the conflict increased, so did the support for information transmission systems, such as radar.

"I was lucky to make it home," Puckett said. "I'll never forget how awful the weather was and the friends I lost."

After serving more than 27 years, Puckett retired in the grade of master sergeant, at Vandenberg Air Force Base, California. Soon after retiring, Puckett obtained a bachelor's degree in education and became a history teacher.

Puckett now works as a substitute teacher and spends his time with his two children and wife of more than 60 years.

"If I had the option of doing it all over again, I would," Puckett said.

An inspiration for current and future generations, Puckett's story still inspires others today. His grand-nephew currently serves at Little Rock AFB, and his great grandchildren listen to his memoirs in awe.

"Opportunities to hear stories from the Greatest Generation are fleeting," said U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Matthew Puckett, 714th Training Squadron commander. "Some of my greatest moments are listening to my grandpa and great uncle talk about why they served and their willingness to serve."

A technician demonstrates how a patient with a traumatic brain injury uses driving assessment and rehabilitation treatment to help in regaining the ability to drive their cars at the National Intrepid Center of Excellence in Bethesda, Md.

Research, technology aid effort to help TBI patients

By Shannon Collins

DoD News Defense Media Activity

WASHINGTON (AFNS) – Since the Vietnam War, doctors have seen an increase in service members returning from combat with traumatic brain injuries from blasts. At the National Intrepid Center of Excellence (NICoE), a directorate of Walter Reed National Military Medical Center in Bethesda, Maryland, doctors and therapists use research and technology to help service members with TBI in their recovery.

Dr. Louis French, the center's deputy director, said NICoE uses this research and technology to study the structure and metabolic activity in the brain, how it metabolizes glucose, where the blood flow is, and the electrical activity in the brain.

"All of those things we want to know go into this idea of function, and we want to visualize those better," he said. "And the techniques we have developed, there are ways of better visualizing abnormalities in the brain. Once we gain better insight into what these abnormalities are, then we can find ways of targeting treatments better."

MEG

NICoE is the only clinic in the nation to have a magnetoencephalography scanner, or MEG, dedicated to the treatment of TBI, said Dr. John Hughes, a neurologist and the director of the MEG lab. "It's really unprecedented that an institution can have this dedicated to one disorder," he added.

The MEG is a technique used to measure and record the brain's magnetic fields during its normal activity and provide insight into how the brain is functioning, Hughes said. NICoE uses it to study the electrical oscillations in a mildly traumatic brain as well as the physiology of the cortex of the brain and the psychological issues related to it, he said, noting that there are only 40 MEG labs in the country.

"The fact we have an MEG lab that's really dedicated to understanding traumatic brain injury is a wonderful opportunity for all of our active-duty members and veterans to help us understand these disorders," he said. "This is a pretty unique situation. It's very sophisticated instrumentation."

The MEG requires liquid helium that goes over more than 300 sensors placed just above the scalp to keep the sensors very cold.

"I'm thrilled to be able to apply this technology to this specific problem," Hughes said. He said the MEG is similar to the electroencephalography, or EEG, used to record the electrical component of brainwaves, but the magnetic fields require the more sophisticated instrumentation.

"If we continue to study traumatic brain injury with MEG, we can't fail to make significant insights into understanding the physiological basis of symptoms of TBI, and we'll reap huge benefits in terms of developing therapies specific to those physiological issues we can discover with MEG," he added.

YOU WON'T FIND A BETTER PLACE TO WORK!

Join the team: Become a Family Child Care Provider

It's more than babysitting; it's a small business run by people who prefer to work in their homes. Help support the Air Force mission by caring for the children of our military and DoD civilian personnel while establishing a professional career for yourself.

There are several options available to you when you become a licensed provider. You can choose to work full-time, part-time, Special Needs Care or ECC (Expanded Child Care) programs or a combination of these programs. The ECC programs include: Extended Duty, HCC (Home Community Care), which is providing care for military families on drill weekends. Also included in ECC programs is RHC (Return Home Care), DCC (Deployment Child Care) and PDCC (Pre-Deployment Child Care).

At minimal start-up cost to you, you can operate your own home-based business, set your own hours, be with your children, and care for other children at home. The FCC staff will provide training to assist you in providing a safe, nurturing in-home day care for children ages 2 weeks to 12 years in your government home or affiliated off-base home.

As an added benefit, you'll also receive 24-36 hours of AF Standardized training, annual refresher training and be eligible for low cost insurance options. The FCC program will assist you in seeking the Child Development Associate Credential (CDA) and accreditation through the National Association for Family Child Care (NAFCC). Your credentials follow you wherever you go, making your home-based business portable. When you PCS to a new duty station, you can move your business along with your family. You can make a difference by providing quality and affordable child care in a home setting. *Under AFI 34-144, you must be licensed to provide child care for more than "10 hours per week on a regular basis" in your base quarters.

Qualifications for becoming a licensed FCC provider:

- Be able to speak, read and write English
- Be at least 18 years of age
- Have a high school diploma or GED
- Be physically and mentally capable of providing care
- Able to obtain required insurance
- Willing to complete the training and follow all requirements

For more information or to put in an application, please stop by the FCC office, Bldg. 1988 or call 987-3156. Jill Lund-FCC Coordinator, Jacque Johannes, USDA Resource and Referral Clerk.
